GENERAL HARRISON IS DEAD

THE END CAME PEACEFULLY AT 4:45 YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

He Never Rallied During the Day After a Restless Night—Sketch of His Life—Born in Ohio in 1833.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 13.—General Benjamin Harrison died at 4:45 o'clock this afternoon without regaining consciousness. His death was quiet and painless, there being a gradual sinking until the end came, which was marked by a single grasp for breath as life departed from the body. The relatives, with a few exceptions, and several of his old and tried friends, were at the former President's bedside when he passed away.

The General's condition was so bad after a restless night that the attending physicians understood that the end could not be far off, and all bulletins sent out from the sick room were to this effect, so that the family and friends were prepared when the final blow came. The gradual failing of the remarkable strength shown by the patient became very noticeable in the afternoon and a few moments before the end there was an apparent breakdown on the part of the sufferer, as he surrendered to the disease against which he had been so bravely battling for so many hours. The change was noticed by the physicians, and the relatives and friends who had retired from the sick room to the library below, were quickly summoned and reached the bedside of the General before he passed away.

News of the death spread quickly throughout the city, and several of the more intimate friends hurried at once to the Harrison residence. The word was flashed from the bulletins of all the newspapers and thus comunicated to the people on their way home in the evening. The announcement produced great sorrow. Within a few minutes the flags on all the public buildings and most of the downtown business blocks were hoisted at half mast and other outward manifestations of mourning were made.

Ex-President Benjamin Harrison was born at North Bend, Ohio, August 20, 1833. He was the son of John Scott Harrison, who was third son of Benjamin Harrison, signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was brought up on his father's farm, graduated at Miami University, 1852, and was admitted to the bar. Elected reporter of the Indiana Supreme Court, he assisted in raising the Seventieth Regiment of Indiana Volunteer, of which he was appointed Colonel by Governor Morton, 1962.

His gallantry induced General Hooker to recommend to the Secretary of War his promotion to brigadier general. In the spring, 1865, he assumed command of his brigade, and June 8th was mustered out of service, with the rank of brevet brigadier general. In 1876 he ran for Governor of Indiana, but was defeated. He was appointed a member of the Mississippi River Commission in 1879, was chairman of the Indiana delegation in the national Rebublican convention of 1880, declined a Cabinet appointment tendered by President Garfield, and was elected United States Senator for the term March 4, 1881, to March 3, 1887.

In 1884, he was delegate at large from Indiana to the Republican national convention, and in the convention of 1888 he received the Presidential nomination on the eighth ballot. In the ensuing election he received a popular vote of 5,441, 923 and an electoral vote of 223, against a popular vote for Cleveland of 5,536,524 and electoral of 168. In June 1892, he was renominated by his party but was defeated for re-election by Mr. Cleveland. Since then he has busied himself with the practice of law. Recently he was appointed a member of the International Arbitration Commission by President McKinley.

He went to Washington about a month ago as a member of the Presbyterian committee which had under consideration the proposition for a revision of the creed. Of late it was said his relations with President McKinley were strained because he declared in a magazine article that the Constitution followed the flag, wherever it went thus controverting the position of the Administration in regard to the Philippines and Poro Rico.

MEMBERS LEAVING

FORCE USED TO KEEP QUORUM

LEGISLATORS DON'T WANT TO STAY IN RALEIGH WITHOUT PAY.

Last Night and This Morning the Sergeant-at-arms Prevented Twenty-five Members From Leaving the Capitol—Allen Opens the Prosecution of the Judges.

Special Dispatch to The Telegram.

Raleigh, March 14.—It is becoming apparent that members are not desiring to stay in Raleigh since the time for which pay may be drawn has expired. This morning when the House met Representative Oliver asked to be allowed to go home.

Several members quickly objected, saying that there was now here barely a quorum.

The Sergeant-at-Arms last night and this morning prevented twenty-five members from leaving the city.

The railway stations were watched all night and today. At ten o'clock only twenty-six were present, though at noon there were said to be seventy-two.

The criminal Insane bill passed.

The bill allowing the sale of the lands held by the Board of Education, if necessary was re-referred.

The Conference Committee on the revenue bill reported, recommending that the House concur in the Senate amendments to twenty sections, and the Senate recede from the amendments to eight sections. The report was adopted and the bill ordered ratified.

The Senate refused to concur in the House amendments to the primary election bill.

The bill appointing county boards of education passed.

The bill providing for the criminal insane in the penitentiary passed

THE IMPEACHMENT TRIAL.

The court of impeachment met at noon. All the parties to the trial were present execept Judge Douglas, who has grip.

Judge Allen, chairman of the board of managers, made the opening speech for the prosecution. He spoke an hour and said even if the people were opposed to impeachment that ought not to deter Senators from a strict performance of duty. He made five charges against the Judges and said that their reply was a remarkable document, combining the learning of the lawyer, the skill of the diplomat and the craft of the politician. He also said that the judiciary is now the weakest branch of the government, and argued that the doctrine of Hoke vs. Henderson was dangerous.

The court meet again at noon tomorrow.

Had Himself Locked Up.

Yesterday afternoon a man approached a city policeman with the strange request to be locked up. His name is Swaim,and he has been the night watchman at the Hucomuco mills. He explained that one of the bosses in the mill had told him something about one of his (Swaim's) children that had caused him to give the child a severe whipping. He afterwards found that the man had told a lie about the matter and caused him to unjustly whip the child. He was subject to fits of temporary insanity he told the officer, and he wanted to be locked up lest one of these overtake him and he should kill the man. His desire to be locked up was granted and he is in jail today, awaiting the arrival of his brother to assume charge of him.

When he went in he carried a fiddle under one arm and a Bible under the other, evidently intending to be in a position to passthe time.

GRIP AN OLDTIMER.

Mistake that It's a New Thing. A Couple of Other Items.

Grip, which everybody now has, has just had, or will have soon, is usually supposed to have been prevalent in this country only about ten years, and nobody before that time had ever heard of it, so far as the recollection of the present generation is concerned. Every body thinks that grip is the effect of a disease germ imported to this country from Russian for the first time about the year 1888. But a Greensboro lady has discovered that this popular belief is a great fallacy. She has found that it existed in this State at least one time prior to the building of the North Carolina railroad. She made the find in quite an odd but a very indisputable way. The lady referred to was a few days ago looking through a diary which had been kept by her mother. In the diary written years ago, is the poit blank statement that the writer's husband had the grip. It was not called la grippe, enfluenza, or any other name except the plain "grip," and was entered in a matter of fact way, and without comment, as if the disease was nothing out of the ordinary.

It will be recollected that Col. Ec. Lyon told a couple of stories about some Rockingham people. It was thought at the time that he was getting a scrap on his hands, and it came the first time he went over in our sister town. That is to say, the scrap came but the Colonel didn't partake. He left. While over there he got the idea of running and riding in his head, and came back with a puzzle which he learned while taking the exercise necessarrp to avoid the afore-mentioned scrap. "Now," says he, "boys I've got a question that it takes brains to work out. A woman had $100. She spent $80 of it for a drum, fifteen cents for a drum stick, and five cents for street car fare, how old was she? Can you work that out by the time I get back from Rockingham?"

The conversation suddenly drifted to hiccoughs, without any apparent reason, just as conversations may take a turn in any unexpected direction, when several men are sitting around discussing about the welfare of the neighbors and the country. "Every once in a while a story crops up in the news about somebody who is hiccoughing to death," said the newspaper man. "I remember once there was a man in another town who was afflicted in that way. I went up there about a week after his case had been exploited and found that he had received over a hundred letters from all over the country advising various cures, each of which was infalliable. I believe the man finally died." "That some times happens and when it does, all the science of medicine is baffled," said the doctor. "But the ordinary, every day case of hiccoughs is generally caused by indigestion, coupled with an over-indulgence in whiskey. In such case there is no reason why the affliction should not be cured at once. A simple remedy, and one that seldom fails, is to find the pulse in the left rist with the middle finger. and thumb of the left hand. Press as hard as possible, and at the same time hold the breath until the lungs feel like bursting. Nine times out of ten it will effect a cure."

To Sit on the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge James E. Boydhas been designated to sit on the bench of the Circuit Court of Appeals at Richmond, Va., in May. This will conflict with the session of the Asheville court, and the time of holding that court will probably be postponed.

THE LAYING OF OUR SIDEWALKS

FIRST WORK BEGUN UNDER THE NEW PLANS OF THE CITY.

The City Can Require Property Holders to Buy Brick and Lay Sidewalk—Can Require Them to Pay Part on Paving the Street.

Some time ago the city received a quantity of pressed brick to be sold to property owners for side walk laying. Mr. T. A. Lyon is the first man to take advantage of the opportunity, and is now improving the walk in front of the property he owns on Summit avenue.

The city grades and curmbs the sidewalk, and the owner of the adjacent lot must buy the brick and have them placed. The city will require all owners to do this wherever it does any grading.

There is also a provision in the new charter by which the city has the power to pave such streets as it may see fit and require the property owners to pay one fourth of the cost. This plan will be followed whenever the streets are paved.

There is one thing sure, and that is if the city can do much grading under this plan it will be only a short time till the residential section of the city will be beautiful. And the sidewalks over which people are compelled to walk to and from their homes are the ones that need fixing.

BASEBALL TALK.

Some of the Boys are Trying to Raise Some Enthusiasm—Want a Ground in the City.

Mr. L. J. Brandt, one of the "cranks" says it's time for Greensboro to do something for ball. He thinks the city should go into the Virginia-Carolina League. Wilmington and Raleigh are the only towns of the State in it, and two more are wanted. Charlotte and Durham will probably not go in, and the talk is now of Greensboro and Winston. It will require something like $1,500 to play in the Virginia-Carolina League backyard and the fellows who go to carry the boys may begin to shell down the corn.

Whether Greensboro gets in the league or not she will have some local ball. One drawback has been the distance of the park from the city. This is to be overcome by opening a ground within the city limits. The Mendenhall field, on Ashe street, opposite the residence of Col. Barringer will perhaps be used. This is convenient and would get crowds.

At His Old Tricks.

Many of our readers will remember the man J. L. Roberts who was about two years ago tried in Greensboro and sentenced to the penitentiary for five years for passing bogus checks. Some time since he was pardoned by Governor Russell. In the Hotel World, a publication devoted to hotels and their interests, and issued in Chicago, under date of March 9th, there appears an article from Youngstown, Ohio, concerning a man who has been operating in that section under the name of W. L. Miller. The description given of this man tallies in every respect to that of the man Roberts who was pardoned by Governor Russell.

As will be remembered Roberts passed a bogus check at HotelC legg, borrowed money on a stolen baggage check at the McAdoo House, and had previously stolen an overcoat from the Yarborough House in Raleigh. It is not known whether the man has been apprehended or not.

Teaching Hypnotism.

Greensboro has many kinds of schools, but it appears by an advertisement in this paper that there is to be another one, "Dr. H. M. Fancher, psychologist and hypnotist," says he will probably give a public entertainment next week, and put a man to sleep two or three days. His principal business he says, is to teach doctors, dentists, and laymen.

A YOUNG MOTHER SLAIN AT HER BABY'S CRIB.

Young Wife Falls a Victim to the Rage of Her Husband--One Gash Across Her Throat From Behind and One Across His Own.

Washington Post.

The little gate cottage at the Whitney avenue entrance to the Soldier's Home was last night the scene of a most bloody and revolting domestic tragedy. Mrs. Margeret Morehiser, twenty-one years of age, an attractive young woman and daughter of the gatekeeper, was murdered in the cottage, which is occupied by her aged father and mother. her throat being cut form ear to ear with a razor in the hands of her worthless and discarded husband, Charles Morehiser, a pensioner, aged fifty-one years, and an inmate of the Soldier's Home.

The murderer rushed from the cottage immediately after the crime, and a short distance from the scene of the terrible deed, slashed his own throat with the same weapon with wihch he had killed his young wife. He was taken to Freedmen's Hospital, where he died ten minutes after reaching the institution.

When Mrs. Morehiser was attacked by her husband, she had her baby in her arms. With the child clasped to her breast, the dying woman staggered from her room into the front room, occupied by her aged parents, and with the blood streaming over her garments and the white robes of her child, she fell and expired in the presence of the horrified mother and father.

The little cottage floor was red with blood last night after the tragedy. In the parents' room lay the body of Mrs. Morehiser, and beside it sat the aged couple, the mother having in her arms the child of the dead.

GIRL'S AGED PARENTS HEART-BROKEN.

Old Pat Ford, stanch, hardy, brave, old Union veteran that he is, tried to bear up agaisnt the terrible affair, but he gave way now and then to pitiful sobs.

"Oh, Maggie! Maggie!" the old man moaned. "What did he kill you for? Sorry a day i t was you met him, and I told you so, but you would not have it."

The old woman rocked to and fro with her grandchild in her arms. There was a wild, frightened stare in her eyes. She seemed to be stricken dumb by the scene. The small child in her arms, whose little garments were reddened with her mother's blood, cried sadly, and the old woman tried to quiet her in vain.

The murderer and suicide was born in Washington. He first enlisted in the Sixth United States Cavalry, in 1878, and at that time was a harness-maker by trade. He re-inlisted, and served in theApache campaign, and was wounded in October, 1886. In the spring time of 1888 he was discharged from the army. Previous to that time he had been a corporal, but was reduced to ranks. Coming to Washington after his discharge, he was very ill for a time as a result of his wounds. He opened a barber shop on Brightwood avenue, near Marshall street, about two years ago, and there became acquainted with Maggie Ford, the daughter of the veteran gatekeeper.

After a short courtship they married much against the will of the old people, who never liked Morehiser. They went to live over the barber shop, and remained there until Morehiser went out of business. He had neglected his work and lost his custom, for on every day he received his pension money, which was $17, he went on a protracted spree.

Last January, while he and his wife were living with the Fords, Morehiser became so reckless that his wife decided not to live with him any longer. About this time he became an inmate of the Soldier's Home.

Eight months ago a baby was born to the couple, and Morehiser professed to have great regard for the little one. In spite of his wife's aversions to him, he would occassionally go and see the child. He called Monday night, and was permitted to remain for a while, but became very abusive, and left in

TEXANS BURN A NEGRO AT THE STAKE

The Murderer Trailed by Bloodhounds and Done Away With After Being Spirited a Distance of Forty-five Miles.

Corsican, Texas, March 13.—John Henderson, colored, who brutally assaulted and murdered Mrs. Younger, a farmer's wife, living just outside this city, several days ago, was burned to death in the court house square here at noon today.

A written confession of the crime, attested by Justice Roberts was secured from the prisoner.

Five thousand people witnessed the burning and business was practically suspended for a time.

Henderson was captured yesterday after a long chase. He was trailed by bloodhounds from the Younger homestead, many miles back and forth across the country and was finally captured near Hillsboro. The officer took him to the latter place and were impelled, through fear of mobs, to start for Fort Worth. When the train reached Itasca, a party of Younger's friends overpowered the guards and hustled Henderson from the train. He was conveyed across the prarie, a distance of 45 miles to Corsicana, where he was placed in jail to prevent the infuriated citizens from tearing him to pieces.

A committee was appointed to see him and pass finally upon his guilt or innocence. Finally he made a written confession that he had murdered and "unknown white lady three miles north of Corsicana, March 6th." There was no one present he said, but himself and the woman's two little children. He said he did not know why he did it.

When it became public that Henderson had confessed people swarmed around the jail. It was decided to burn the prisoner at the stake at 2 p. m., but news was received that troops had been statred from Dallas, and the execution was hurried.

A railroad rail was driven into the ground in the corner of the court house spuare. Boxes and dry timber were piled around it and saturated with oil. Just before noon, about forty men rushed from the jail across the square, to the place where the rail had been planted. In their midst was Henderson handcuffed. The men formed a circle, holding to a chain which surrounded the prisoner to prevent the crowd from tearing him away. The negro was fastened to the rail with wire and chains.

Cans of oil were emptied over his clothing and dozens of lighted matches touched the inflamable material. The fire alarms were rung and the stores were deserted, their occupants rushed to the spuare to witness the burning.

Just as the pile was fired Conway Younger, husband of the murdered woman jumped at Henderson and slashed him across the face with a knife. Henderson gave no indications of pain or suffering. He rolled his eyes to get a glimpse of the angry faces which surrounded him and there was a slight movement of the hands.

In ten minutes Henderson was dead. At no time did he make an outcry other than an occassional groan.

clear my skin, my face was in a horrible condition literally covered with red spots, pimples, blackheads, moth patches and freckles. And whenever the weather changed eczema, chap and salt rheum added to my misery. I suffered a thousand deaths, and when I sent for a trial of Mme. Ribault's beautifiers just as I had done before time and again with other advertised remedies, I did not expect any results, imagine my surprise when the next day all redness and soreness were gone. At the end of a week my skin began to clear, the freckles and moth patches disappeared and the eczema and salt rheum were completely cured. I improved so wonderfully that my friends did not recognize me, so quickly had the change taken place. My skin is now perfectly lovely, and there is not a blemish or wrinkle anywhere.

I hope all ladies will at least try these marvelous beautifiers."

Do not delay but write immediately. The treatment is harmless, a natural beauty maker and will permanently remove all tan, freckles, moth patches, pimples, blackheads, flesh worms, sunburn, chaps, roughness and any and all skin imperfections no matter what they may be.

Write to-day without fail and the free treatment will be mailed prepaid with full directions and all particulars absolutely free. Address, MME. M. RIBAULT, 3358 Elsa Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

THURSDAY, MARCH 14.

General Benjamin Harrison passed away yesterday afternoon at the age of sixty-eight years. As a citizen, as a member of society, as the highest public servant of the land, he measured up to the requirements set for an ideal American. He was a man of ability, which he used as one who would humbly increase the talents given him.

WHY DO MEN GIVE?

Mr. Andrew Carnegie is referred to as the only man who admits that he has more money than he needs. This reference to him is no doubt due to the fact that he has not only given with more than princely liberality but is credited with the remark that no man ought to die rich. He is giving libraries to towns and cities in all parts of the United States, properly making it a condition that each place make a guarantee to maintain the library. He has has just made an offer to Norfolk of $50,000 for a library, provided the people of the city will put up a building and guarantee $5,000 per year to maintain the library. Mr. Carnegie's great business experience and his knowledge of men has led him to know that the the man or men who are taught to help themselves are the best helped, and so, in making his gifts he attaches a condition that the communities receiving them shall do a reasonable part.

In this connection, and remembering the oft repeated implication that Mr. Carnegie, and other men who have made large money, give it away for the sake of praise, we copy a paragraph from a recent article in the Sunday School Times, by Mr. Robert C. Ogden, on "Integrity inthe Business World." He says:

An incidental but important witness to the presence of integrity in American business life appears in the characters of the majority of men owning handsome fortunes. The short list of the wealthy who live for the shallow joys of ostentation in "society," so called, is quickly recited. Afterward comes the longer list of noble names, rich in the world's goods, who believe and practice the gospel of wealth.

It is a far cry from present conditions to the golden age in which the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man shall be ideally reached, but none can deny the splendid service to humanity of the institutions created and sustained by the liberality of men of fortune,—men of creeds, men of no creeds, men of heart and head.

That schools of learning, institutions of art, hospitals, asylums, and the numerous other organizations for education and philanthropy, are the price paid by unscrupulous greed for a veneer of respectibility, is not true. "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

Mr. Ogden is himself a liberal giver and a friend to education. He will conduct a party from New York south next month, and as previously mentioned by The Telegram, will attend the educational conference to be held in Winston. With Mr. Ogden, we hold that it is a false cry which attributes false motives to men who give, as a rule. Like all rules, there are exceptions to this one. We don't believe that in many cases men play philanthropist. They are born such.

FRANK STANTON'S JUST FROM GEORGIA

Atlanta Constitution.

A pathetic case of a very small boy without home or parents and in need of assistance was at the police station this morning.

The boy is William Franklin Jones, who had travelled alone from Augusta to Atlanta, although he is hardly more than ten years old. When he reached the city Saturday he became involved in a rock battle with other boys and was arrested under charge of disorderly conduct.

The boy was sick yesterday and was released on his own recognizance to to appear in court this afternoon. He appeared again at police station today and was seized with a severe chill, followed by fever, and lay moaning in the office.

He says his parents are both dead and that he stays "just anywheres."—Extract from a local.

I

He is worthy our love and our tears
Just one who stays anywheres!
A little fellow, with eyes made dim
For lack of the love that is lost to him,
The love that left him—perhaps with tears,
A boy who stayed anywheres!

II

We are busy with hope and with cares,
But there's one who stays anywheres!
A little fellow to whom was given
The promise of love and the Kingdom of Heaven!
Shall the cold world leave him in grief and tears—
A boy who stays anywheres?

III

What of the cross he bears—
That boy who stays anywheres?
There is light enough in the homes of men—
In the eyes of mothers, to win again
From the depths where he shivers, and weeps, and fears,
A boy who stays anywheres!

'Spite o' the griefs that beset us,
This is the land where we dwell:
Let us say to the world,
"That the storm-flags are furled,
An' we're doin' tollable well!'

En Springtme say:

The bright ways are smiling, believers—
It is not so far to the day;
All of our troubles

Every dim sorrow
Will meet a tomorrow
When winter will blossom like May!

A YOUNG MOTHER SLAIN.

Late last night Sergt. Slattery. of the Eighth precinct, learned from Mrs. Ford that she had seen Morehiser outside the cottage about suppertime last evening. She cautioned him to go away from the cottage, saying to him: "You know you are only causing disturbance coming here." He went away but said he would return.

Last night about 8:30 o'clock the young woman went to her room in the five-room, one-story cottage, and was putting her child to bed when the murderer entered, having comeinto the cottage by the back entrance. The two old people were in the front room which adjoins their daughter's room.

KILLED HER WITH ONE BLOW.

As the mother of the baby was undressing the little one the desperate husband and father stepped up behind her, and without warning drew the razor blade across his wife's throat.

Turning on her slayer, she made a gurgling noise, which reached the old people's ears. They started and listened, wondering what it was. They had not long to wait to learn the terrible truth.

The door was pushed upon and the young wife half staggered toward them, the blood pouring from her frightful wound. She reached toward her mother with the baby, as if to tell the old people to take care of it, and then fell expiring at their feet. In the wild confusion of the moment they saw nothing but the dying daughter before them. Later on, however, Ford recollected that he heard retreating footsteps in the passage which leads from the rear entrance of the cottage.

Down Whitney avenue to 3400 Bright wood avenue the murderer ran from the scene of the first part of the tragedy. He was seen by James Morgan, an old soldier, who knew him, but Morgan did not know there was anything wrong. At the number named on Brightwood avenue, which is seven blocks from the cottage, John Green keeps a grocery stotre.

MURDERER KILLS HIMSELF.

Into this store Morehiser rushed, and with the bloody razor in his hand walked back into the rear room, where Green and his wife were seated. He knew both of them and they were startled at his appearance." Good bye," said he to them, and as he stood in the center of the room he slashed the razor across his throat, cutting it from the center of the windpipe to the right ear. The grocer and his wifeand some persons inthe store were horrified at the act, but before they could do anything for Morehiser he dashed from the store and ran down Brightwood avenue to Steuben street, where he fell and lay in a pool of blood. His course down the side walk was marked by a trail of blood which was visible to all passersby.

A spectator telephoned to Freedmen's Hospital for the ambulance, and in a few minutes it arrived with Dr. Coleman in charge. With all haste the dying man was taken to the hospital. He was placed on the operating table at once, and while being operated on by the surgeons, expired from hemorrhage. Policemen were on hand to get some statement from him, but none could be had. The doctors say that his injuries were such that it was impossible for him to speak at any time after he gashed his throat.

YELLOW JOURNALS ORIGINAL ORIGIN

Allen Sangree in Ainslee's.

"It is interesting, in the first place, to note the casual way in which this term yellow journalism, now world-wide in use, had its origin. Among newspaper men I find some controversy on the subject, but the consensus of opinion is that when Mr. Arthur Brisbane, now managing editor of the Evening Journal suggested to Mr. Outcault, the artist, that he introduce the Sunday World one of Phil May's gutter-snipe sketches from a London publication, he lay the fuse that was soon to be touched. Brisbane was then on the Sunday World, and that paper immediately became popular for its comic supplement containing Outcault's 'Kid Pictures'. On the Sunday that New York entertained Li Hung Chang, Mr. Outcault brought out his tough boy, who had always worn a sort of night-gown in vivid yellow, with the words issuing from his mouth: "Gee, I got a yellow shirt, too!" Thenceforward the comic prodigy was kept in that same colored garb.

"What had been a passing thought and fancy of Mr. Brisbane now developed into a valuable asset to the business office of the World. Accordingly, when Mr. Hearst bought both Mr. Brisband and Mr. Outcault, and they carried with them to the Journal their yellow kid, bitterness rigned on Park Row. The damage suit for fifty thousand dollars which the World brought against the Journal, I believe, was never forced to an issue owing to the terrific rush that followed our declaration of war against Spain. It was near the end of the war when, newspaper men say, the term yellow journalism emerged from the colloquial mint, and the credit for its coinage is ascribed variously to Richard Harding Davis and Peter F. Dunne (Mr. Dooley). Of Mr. Davis it is said that upon arriving in New York, after having some disagreement with Mr. Hearst, he remarked savagely to some correspondents: 'Well, I am done with yellow journalism.' Mr. Dunne's friends insist that he first used the term in one of his 'Dooley' articles, and neither of these gentlemen has as yet succeeded in convincing the other of his unworthiness of the claim."

THE HOSPITAL HABIT

Acquired by People Who Have a Prejudice Against Work.

Many Capable of Making a Good Living Resort to Subterfuges in Order to Gain a Haven of Rest—The Hospital Horror.

"Two queer metaphysical problems," said a New Orleans physican, reports the Times-Democrat, "are the hospital habit and the hospital horror. I have encountered any number of cases of both and have always found them more or less of a puzzle. The hospital habit is well known to every institution in the country, and in speaking of it I have no reference to the scores of constitutional loafers and vagabonds to be found in all large cities who would rather spend their time in any kind of shelter, even that of a jail, than to go out and hustle for a living. The people I have in mind are of entirely different stamp, and are generally of rather superior intelligence. For some mysterious reason they become fascinated by the peculiar life in a hospital and will resort, eventually, to all kinds of subterfuges to continue in it. It is clear they are not attracted by a prospect of idleness, for they are always morbidly anxious to curry favor by making themselves useful, and will work harder than the paid attendants, so the only way they can be accounted for is on the theory that they are really in love with their surroundings. One of the most singular cases of the hospital habit that ever came under my observation was that of an Englishman who spent a couple of years here in the latter 80s. He was a middle-aged man, well educated, well read and capable of earning a good living at his profession, which was that of an accountant, but he had fallen under the strange spell of the hospital and apparently lost all other interest in life. I am satisfied he was in excellent health, but he pretended to be suffering from some obscure spinal trouble, and feigned the symptoms so cleverly that he had spent the best part of six or seven years in different institutions. Meanwhile he had become an excellent nurse and was so far superior to the average hired help that the surgeons winked at his fault for the sake of having him around. There are a great many curious phases of human nature continually in evidence in a sick ward, and I really believe this man derived an intellectual pleasure in their study. He evidently had a taste for the bizarre, and the place interested him as one might become interested in some morbid novel. We had many long talks, and what he said showed a high order of thought. Finally he drifted away and, I dare say, he is in some hospital at this moment. Others I have encountered seemed to find some frightful perverted pleasure in the mere spectacle of human suffering, and I have known one or two women who invariably tried to be present at surgical operations as volunteer assistants.

"The hospital horror is a less cryptic emotion," the doctor went on, "but some of its manifestations are sufficiently queer. Viewed in the abstract, a hospital is eminently the proper place for anybody who is sick, and in future years I am sure no serious cases will ever be treated in private homes. Imperfect sanitation, incompetent attendance, danger of contagion and a score of other reasons suggest themselves immediately as against the practice, and statistics show clearly that the percentage of recoveries is very much higher in any well conducted professional institution. It often happens that the very tenderness and over solicitude of friends and relatives militates against a cure, and all these things are, or ought to be, perfectly apparent to anybody who gives the subject a moment's thought. Yet there are thousands of people who have an unconquerable dread and loathing of a hospital. They would rather be sick in some cheerless tenement, neglected, unattended and deprived of every comfort than to occupy the best special room that a first-class institution can afford. They may be entirely isolated from the general wards and see nothing whatever of the internal workings of the establishment, but the mere knowledge that they are under the same roof preys on their nerves and retards progress. I was called in last winter to attend a man who had contracted pneumonia, and found him in a miserable gallery bedroom, with no facilities for heating and the most squalid and depressing surroundings I ever saw in my life. Some friends came to the rescue and arranged for his admission as a pay patient in one of the very best hospitals. I thought he would be overjoyed, but he turned livid with fright and aversion and begged to be allowed to remain where he was. 'My God! doctor,' he pleaded, 'don't let them take me there! I can't stand it!' I told him bluntly he would die unless he was moved, but that prospect had no terrors compared to those of the hospital. He was an intelligent man, knew perfectly well he would get the best of care at the place suggested, but was simply unable to overcome an innate sense of repulsion. He died a few days afterward in his bleak little bedroom. On another occasion a patient of mine was taken to a hospital much against his will and given every attention in a beautiful private room. His convalescence was very unsatisfactory, and I couldn't understand what was operating against recovery. One day he burst into hysterical tears. 'Oh, doctor!' he wailed, 'take me away! Take me anywhere out of this ghastly place!' He had no complaint to make; it was 'just the idea,' to quote his own words. He was sent home and was soon well. It is useless to argue with such people; the prejudice is unreasoning, and they can no more help it than they can help the color of their hair."

WOMEN'S INFLUENCE.

She Is Largely Responsible for the Character of Members of the Other Sex.

"The Young Man Out of Business Hours" is the theme upon which Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, discourses in a recent article in the Saturday Evening Post, in the course of which he says:

"There is positively nothing of such value to young men—yes, and to old men, too—as the chastening and powerful influence for good which women bring into their lives. I should be the last man in the world to suggest that a young man should keep himself 'tied to his mother's apron strings,' as is the saying of the people, and this is not what I mean when I earnestly suggest that he keep as close to his mother's opinions, teachings and influence as the circumstances of life will permit. The same thing, of course, may be said with reference to a man's wife—even more strongly, if possible. But the conversation and opinion of any good woman are, as a practical matter and a measure of worldly wisdom, simply beyond price. She is wise with that sublimated reason called 'woman's instinct.'

"There is, too, a human quality kept alive and growing in your character by woman's association and influence that, as a matter of business power in meeting the world and its problems, is far and away beyond the value of the craft of the trickiest gamester of affairs and business and politics who ever lived. It is a saying of the farmer folks among whom I was raised that such and such a person 'has principle,' meaning that the person so described is upright, trustworthy, judicious—that such a person's attitude toward God and man and the world is correct.

"Women have principle in precisely the sense in which that term is used by the country people. They will keep you true to the order of things—to the constitution of the universe. They will do this, not so much by preaching at you as by the influence of their very personality. The man who has gotten out of touch with womankind is not to be feared. He is to be pitied rather than feared, for he is out of harmony with the world—he is disarmed. No matter how large his mind and great his courage, he is neutralized for all natural, proper-proportioned, and therefore enduring effort.

"I know a physician who, still young, has reached the head of his profession in this country. Sundays and the evenings with his wife and children are not enough for him. He takes Wednesdays also. Precisely this same thing is done by the great young captain of finance and affairs whom I described first in this paper as being a total abstainer. This is not done for the rest it gives these men, or if it is done for that it is not the greatest benefit they get out of it. They come back to their work with clearer and stronger conceptions of human character and of truth in the abstract and the concrete, with which their profession or business may be, must deal. They have a new tenderness, a larger tolerance and a broader vision of life and humanity, and, therefore, of their business, which is merely a phase of life and affairs."

Skim Milk Used to Make Paper.

One of the most profitable side industries growing out of the manufacture of paper came from the discovery of the fact that casein was vastly better than the glue formerly in use for putting the heavy coating on the fine grades of paper. The discovery was not only a bonanza for the man who made it and for those who backed it, but also for the dairies. The skim milk which is left after the cream has been taken off for butter and other purposes, and was in the nature of mere refuse for the big dairies, is now turned into a source of profit almost as great as that from butter itself from its use in the manufacture of casein for paper coating and sizing.—Scientific American.

SHROUDED IN MYSTERY.

A Check for a Large Sum Was Cashed in a Singular Manner.

"There isn't a great deal of romance in my business," remarked a prominent Chicago banker to a writer for the Washington Star the other day, "but now and then something turns up out of the ordinary and makes us wonder at the peculiarities of those who have dealings with us. I recall an instance just now which is as yet not explained, and will never be, I fancy, as the chief actor in it was killed some time ago in a railway accident. I never knew the man personally, but he was a depositor in our bank, whose account was a personal one to the extent of $10,000. He carried that much as a rule, and the few checks that he made against it never indicated what his business was. He was about 50 years of age, and very rarely came to the bank. Naturally I nver gave him a thought, for $10,000 is not a large deposit in Chicago, and beyond his deposit I had no interest in him.

"It happened, therefore, that when one day I received a personal letter from our depositor I was a bit surprised, and was still more so when I had read it. I do not recall the exact wording, but it was to the effect that within a day or two a woman would present a check for $5,000, and that as she was unknown he wished me to see that she received the money without trouble, and that she would bring with her means of identification in the person of a little girl, who would answer correctly the questions I must ask her, as directed in his letter, with the answers as he gave them. These questions were simple enough, being only the child's full name, her age to the month, where born, the full name of her mother and her father and of a 'little brother' who was dead. Five thousand dollars was a good deal of money to let go on that kind of evidence, but that was all I had, and the depositor was in California, so that I could not see him personally.

"Well, the next day the paying teller came to me with his eyes bulging, saying that about as hard a looking case of beggar woman as he had ever seen was at the window with a check drawn to the order of Mrs. Blank by Mr. ——, and that as he did not know the woman and the woman did not know how she was to get the money, he had come to ask me about it. I sent for her to come into my private office, which she did, bringing the little girl with her, who was no less a picture of abject poverty than the mother was. All that she could say was that she had received the check by mail from a man whose name was not familiar to her, with instructions to present it at the bank, and the money would be paid her, if she would take her little girl with her. I asked the child the questions I had been requested to ask, and she answered correctly each one, which relieved me of further responsibility, and I ordered the check to be cashed. The woman did not seem to be greatly overcome by her good fortune, and as I could tell her nothing of the man who had given the money to her, she didn't seem to have any further use for me, and went back to the paying teller's window. She asked for the money in $50 bills, and, wrapping it up in an old newspaper, went out of the bank without a word to anybody.

"She was no longer at the address she gave when I sent a messenger there to make inquiries, and her benefactor I never saw again, for he met his death on his way east from California. I fancy he would not have told me the story of his life, but I shall always wonder if the name we carried on our books was the one he carried in his youth."

AN ANCIENT BELIEF.

The ancients believed that rheumatism was the work of a demon within a man. Any one who has had an attack of siatic or inflammatory rheumatism will agree that the affliction is demoniac enough to warrant the belief. It has never been claimed that Chamberlain's Pain Balm would cast out demons, but it will cure rheumatism, and hundreds bear testimony to the truth of this statement. One application relieves the pain, and this quick relief which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by C. E. Holton, Druggist.

A FRIGHTFUL BLUNDER.

AN HONEST MEDICINE FOR LA GRIPPE.

Chamberlain's Cough remedy is theonly thing that has done any good whatever. I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grip have all left me. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medeicine." For sale by A. E. Holton's drug store.

Facilities Soon To Be Installed :

Owing to the rapid growth of the "City of Flowers" I find it necessary to increase capacity for coming summer work. Will shortly add a new 50 horse power engine and 60 horse boiler, washing machine and mangle. These new machines added to present equipment will put the "Gate City" on an equal with any laundry in the south. Would call special attention to the new collar and cuff machine recently purchased which will give either gloss or domestic finish, by simply changing gear from left to right and vice versa. We give gloss finish unless otherwise notified. Give us a trial and be convinced that we can't be beat. Hail white wagons or 'phone 176.

A NIGHT OF TERROR.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought that she must soon die from pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. Kings New Discovery, saying that it had more than once saved her life, and had cured her of consumption. After three doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free at C. E. Holton's drug store.

The stomach controls the situation. Those who are hearty and strong are those who can eat and digest plenty of food. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and allows you to eat all the good food you want. If you suffer from indigestion, heartburn, belching or any other stomach trouble, this preparation can't help but do you good. The most sensitive stomachs can take it. Howard Gardner.

COLD STEEL OR DEATH.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jauntice. He didn't count on the marvellous power of Electric Bitters to cure stomach and liver troubles, but she heard of it, took seven bottles, was wholly cured, avoided surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feels better than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50c at C. E. Holton's drug store.

For the weakness and prostration following grippe there is nothing so prompt and effective as One Minute Cough Cure. This preparation is highly endorsed as an unfailing remedy for all throat and lung troubles and its early use prevents consumption. It was made to cure quickly.

NORTH CAROLINA BACKWOODS TALES

Sara Lindsay Coleman in Chicago Tribune.

The moon light flooded a little clearing in a dense encompassing wilderness—the clearing where Katie's cabin stood. A tangle of vines climbed and clung about the door. Within the single log cabin strings of scarlet pepper pods andl stripes of yellow pumpkin swayed from the smoke stained rafters In the center of the mantle an empty lamp stood—Katie's lamp was often empty. The flickering shadows of the firelight cast a warm light on Katie's face, still youthful, and lingered on the wrinkled, vacant face of her mother. For years she had been an invalid and blind. Katie ministered to her wants with loving thoughtfulness.

Katie was far poorer than her neighbors, and proud with the inborn pride of a mountaineer. She owned her own house and a few acres of ground, but no dog lay on her hearthstone, no cow patiently awaited the milking hour. Katie was too poor for such luxuries. The chicken she raised and sold at the valley store, the woolen stockings, were exchanged for meat, sugar, coffee, as her need suggested.

The night wore on. The moon journeyed across the heavens. Its light danced on the water far below to which the steep clearing shelved. Beyond the stream of fire lighted for chestnuts burned steadily. The crash of a tree broke the stillness. A fitful wind whirled a burning leaf across the stream. A bird soared into the heavens—a startled rabbit bounded up the ridge. Lilac and blue flames sprang up. With mock solemnity they bowed to each other and raced up the mountain side. At the clearing they paused—baffled. But one bold flame wrapped itself around a corn stalk—beneath were dead leaves—and beyond the vines that climbed about Katie's door.

Katie looked about her with bewildered eyes—one side of her cabin was blazing. Some one rushed past her into the smoke and heat.

"Wrap a blanket about ye," he shouted "and follow me." He ran from the house with the old woman in his arms.

Katie followed him up the steep path interlaced with roots and overshadowed by laurel to a quiet cabin. He laid his burden down on the bed. She stirred restlessly. A cock's crow fell on the air. Dawn came with a lagging gait.

The old woman sat up—a wild terror on her face. "Have ye seen my leetle Katie? The prettiest baby in the settlement." She looked at Katie with her vacant eyes. "I've forgot my baby!" she shrieked. "The cabin's on fire, and I lef' my baby."

Suddenly terror faded from the old face—a smile rested on the quivering lips. "Katie," she called, "get my bonnet! I'm goin' ter meetin'. Quick; I hear 'em a-singin'! Quick! war'n't —neve—late—ter—meetin'!

The trembling voice stopped—the tired head dropped forward. Katie closed the eyes that never more would look on anything this side the stars.
